Hancock Schools budget okayed amidst protest from supervisors

BY DENA BISNETTE

Under protest, the Hancock County Board of Supervisors has approved the 1986-87 budget request for the Hancock County School District.

Board Attorney Walter James Phillips told board members Tuesday morning during a meeting with Superintendent of Education Terrell Randolph that state law leaves them no choice other than to approve the $8.5 million budget.

All five board members protested the move because providing the 30 percent local funding requested will require a tax raise of seven to 10 mills.

Board President A.A. Kellar disagreed with other board members, stating that the tax raise might have to go as high as 12 mills. Kellar wanted to know if Randolph had considered the effect of a homeowner tax break that became effective July 1.

According to Hancock County Tax Assessor and Collector Edward Murtagh, the tax break reduces the assessment on owner-occupied single family residences from 15 percent to 10 percent, thereby reducing the total amount of taxes collected in the school district.

The present assessed value of property in the school district totals $56,875,705, according to Lee Bennett of the county's reappraisal department.

Presently, the school tax being levied is 18 mills, which is expected to yield about $371,000 in tax collections this year even with the 10 percent break.

Raising the amount by 10 mills would yield a total collection of about $530,000, Bennett added.

Last year the county contributed $967,263 in tax revenue to the school district budget.

Randolph said he believes that the revenue lost from the residential tax break will be made up in taxes on utilities, adding that the utilities assessment in the county school district has increased.

Bennett said the utilities assessment for the school district is estimated at $10,681,611.

The 18 mills on utilities would yield about $178,000, Bennett said.

When the tax break became effective, Murtagh said some of the lost revenues might be made up in car tag assessments. The total car tag assessment in the county school

Necaise opposes 3-year contracts for principals

BY BRENDA HEATHCOCK

Objecting to recently approved three-year contracts for administrators, Hancock County School Board Member Lennette Necaise said she believes this move is political.

"You're not looking out for the growth of education, you're looking out for personal friends," she said at a Monday night board meeting.

Necaise said if the board believed it feasible to give three-year contracts to administrators, similar contracts should also be given to teachers.

"We all know this is ridiculous and so are three-year contracts to administrators," she said.

"Every person in our school system including lunchroom workers, bus drivers, janitors, secretaries, aides and teachers is evaluated in some way on a yearly basis," Necaise added.

If they are not doing their jobs they are released and this is the only way it should be, she stated.

"The whole state of Mississippi is working diligently to upgrade education from the individual citizen to the legislature," she said.

They are demanding a stiff evaluation program beginning this school year to reward the strong and to weed out the weak, Necaise added.

"By issuing three-year contracts to administrators the board is going against everything the whole state has been doing to move education forward," she said.

Answering for the board, Billie Faye Lyons stated friendship had played no part in the decision to give the administrators three-year contracts.

"First, we have full confidence in the administrators and their abilities," Lyons said, "and we believe they will have no trouble with the planned administrative evaluations."

"We have very dedicated and hard-working administrators and I believe they will be even more so with the security of their contracts," she said.

Most importantly, the board feels the students will benefit from the decision, Lyons added.

The students in the district now have the benefit of having very capable principals for the next three years, she added.

Lyons also said three-year contracts had been under consideration for a couple of years.

A motion by Necaise to void the three-year contracts died for lack of a second.

Worker injured

Construction worker Elmer Thornton of Bay St. Louis was slightly injured Wednesday while working on the new Hancock County Jail.

The injury occurred when an iron wall used in the construction of the jail cells fell and grazed Thornton's leg, according to the Bay St. Louis Police Officer Frank Williams.

Herbert Ladner, job superintendent on the site, said Thornton was taken to Hancock General following the accident but returned to work later that afternoon.

Supervisors return taxes to cities

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Hancock County Board of Supervisors has decided by split decision to return a full share of road and bridge funds to the cities of Bay St. Louis and Waveland.

The money comes from road and bridge maintenance taxes paid by city residents and does not include new construction funds.

Typically, half the amount paid in as taxes is returned to the cities by the county tax collector's office, according to Board Attorney Walter James Phillips.

The other half is usually returned as in-kind services, which includes various types of road work but does not cover lending of county equipment, the attorney said.

According to an attorney general's opinion, the lending of equipment will not be affected, Phillips told the board.

The full share of road and bridge maintenance funding is currently estimated at $87,800 annually for Bay St. Louis and $54,800 for Waveland.

Board President A.A. Kellar, Beat Five Supervisor James Travirca and Beat One Supervisor Bert Courge voted for the move.

Beat Three Supervisor Sam Perniciaro and James Travirca voted against returning the money, saying they prefer to continue doing road projects in those parts of Bay St. Louis included in their districts.

Phillips explained that the supervisors are supposed to obtain credit for in-kind services. If those services go over the half of the road and bridge maintenance funds earmarked for return to the cities, the overage is supposed to be deducted from the money returned.

He said the board is supposed to enter into "definite and specific contracts" for maintenance work in the cities and that those contracts should be spread on board minutes.

Kellar said returning the maintenance money to the cities would help reduce the number of roads that will fall under the jurisdiction of the county's recently hired road maintenance superintendent, William Johnson.

"We will have just one man now handling all the roads and returning these maintenance duties to the cities would take some of the burden off him," Kellar added.

Johnson takes over his road duties with the beginning of the new fiscal year Oct. 1.

Courge, however, requested that Beach Boulevard be excepted from the decision.

Courge said Beach Boulevard should not be turned over to Bay St. Louis and Waveland because the county has several ongoing programs involving that road.

The county is in the process of organizing a three-man beach maintenance crew and has advertised for beach maintenance equipment, which will be purchased with seawall tax funds.

Two suspects apprehended by deputies

BY ELLIS CUEVAS

One person was arrested Wednesday afternoon in connection with an attempted burglary of an occupied dwelling on the Caesar-Necaise Road.

Hancock Sheriff Ronnie Peterson said, "Jeffrey J. Ladner, 29, Rt. 2, Box 330, Pass Christian was arrested and charged with the alleged burglary of an occupied dwelling."

Hancock Criminal Investigator Delbert Seay, who is in charge of the case, stated, "The home's resident was in bed and heard a vehicle drive up to it's front door. The car's occupant got out and tried to open the front door of the mobile home. He then proceeded to drive around the back of the residence and got a large screw driver out of the car's trunk and then tried to pry open the back door."

Bay St. Louis to get new city yard fence

BY BRENDA HEATHCOCK

The Bay St. Louis City Council voted Tuesday to spend more than $5,000 to add a wooden fence to the existing chain link fence surrounding the city yard.

In the past months area residents have protested several times about the appearance of the city yard located behind the Valena C. Jones Complex.

Residents complained that the yard looked more like a city dump than a city yard.

Council Charles Johnson has been continuously pursuing getting rid of the "eyesore."

The council reviewed three bids for the fence and awarded the job to the low bidder, Stinson Fence Company of Bay St. Louis.

Their bid is $5,311 with the other bids ranging from $7,000 to $13,000.

The bid calls for the realignment of the existing fence, removal of barbed wire and repairs to the entrance gate in addition to the attachment of a wooden fence on the outside of the chainlink fence.

The council also assured Senior Citizens Center Director Eve McDonald that the city would continue to furnish space for the program.

McDonald said several senior citizens were concerned over recent reports on rearrangement of space in the VCJ complex.

Mayor Victor Franckiewicz Jr. told McDonald that the senior citizen would continue to have space to carry out their program but that some moves may be made.

Also at the meeting the board accepted an amended budget for the fiscal year 1986.

"The changes are basically to bring budgeted revenues and expenditures in line with actual figures for the current fiscal year," City Clerk Edward Favre said.

There are several minor changes but the bottom line for the departments were basically in line, he added.

In other business, the council: —Appointed Councilmen John Wilkerson and Johnson to serve on the Law Enforcement Consolidation Task Force.

—Approved the appointment of Mary Harris to the Bay St. Louis Parks and Playgrounds Commission.

—Voted for a change in the city's traffic ordinance which would set the speed limit at 25 miles per hour on every street in the city unless posted differently.

Tabled a proposed ordinance on tree preservation and an amendment to the ordinance on fences.

Local library business increases, per capita support declines

Statewide statistics on public library services for FY 1985 were recently published by the Mississippi Library Commission.

According to the report, of the 45 public library systems in the state, Hancock County Library System ranked first in increased population served from 1984 to 1985 and ranked fifth in increased circulation of informational materials.

The report, however, indicates city/county per capita financial support for the system decreased as demand on the library system's services grew.

In FY 1984, per capita income from city and county sources was $5.12 but dropped to $4.57 in 1985. The total operating income from city and county sources for the three libraries in Hancock County was $131,037.

Local government expenditures for public library service in other Coast counties were $873,789 or $5.21 per capita for Harrison County Library System and $803,470 or $5.76 per capita for the Jackson-George Library System.

The 45 library units included in the report primarily serve county of multi-county areas of population. Four libraries were categorized as city units. Income from cities and counties for the 45 library units was $11,664,507 in FY 1985, of that 67 percent was derived from county funds and 31 percent from city funds.

There are 243 stationary libraries and 16 mobile libraries in the state which employ more than 1,000 people. Circulation of informational materials to the public by Mississippi Public Libraries totaled 7,376,379 in FY 1985.

APARTMENT RENTS HIGH IN MANY CITIES

Question: Apartment rents in the United States seem high but having visited other countries, I have seen locations where rents are sky-high. How do rents in the United States compare to rents throughout the rest of the world? R.V., Meridian

Answer: Dear R.V.:
 Yes, rents do seem high in the United States when we move from city to city and hear what someone is paying for an apartment in an urban downtown area.

However, rents for apartments in the United States do not top the list of cities and countries with the highest apartment rents.

Union Bank of Switzerland has completed its annual study of cost of living throughout the world and included in that survey is some interesting information regarding the cost of an apartment at various locations.

The cost of apartment living averages $1,050 per month for the majority of households in New York City.

Monthly rental cost — as defined in the bank's study — includes gas, electric, water, garbage removal, caretaker services and other expenses incurred by the tenant.

Among the other American cities included in the survey, Chicago rents average $750, followed by Los Angeles at $580 and Houston at $530. Average rents in Toronto are $550, while only $460 in Montreal.

The highest average rent recorded in the survey is $1,470 in Abu Dhabi, while the lowest is $80 in Jakarta, Indonesia.

Numerous cities throughout the world show average rents in the $200 to $450 range.

Four cities included in the survey, including New York have average rents in excess of $1,000 per month.

HOME SALES ARE UP

Question: With lower interest rates, the number of homes selling must have increased significantly in recent months. If so, where are the largest number of sales taking place? C.T., Hattiesburg.

Answer: Dear C.T.: As you noted, interest rates — which are currently running more than two percentage points below a year ago — are bringing people into the housing market.

Many are now able to afford a purchase that was not possible only a year ago. Latest figures show that the annual rate of home resales is more than 13 percent above what it was this time last year.

Nationwide, the median price of existing single-family homes increased to almost $78,000 by March of this year with the largest increase occurring in the Northeast, where the median-priced home is currently $76,000.

So far this year slightly over half of the resale homes sold have been in the $40,000-$90,000 range. Less than two percent are priced under $20,000, while more than three percent sell for $250,000 or more.

In addition, more than half of all sales have three bedrooms, 18 percent have one or two bedrooms and 29 percent have four or more bedrooms.

Perhaps forgotten by some is the impact that a good and viable real estate market has on the remaining sectors of the economy.

Estimates are that each existing home sale generates an average of nearly $20,000 worth of economic activity in additional expenditures for such things as landscaping, remodeling, appliances, furniture, legal fees and other housing-related products and services.

Board splits, Kellar votes no

Supervisors reconsider, fund chamber $22,890

BY DENA BISNETTE
The Hancock County Board of Supervisors this week reversed its position on reducing tax revenue funding for the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce and agreed to provide the same $22,890 total as last year.

Beat Three Supervisor Roger Dale Ladner tried several times Monday to convince the rest of the board to change their votes on the matter and succeeded with three board members.

The fifth, Board President A.A. Kellar, refused to change his vote and said he was against providing the chamber with any funding.

The board had voted last week to provide only $9,400 on the contingency that the chamber reorganize its board of directors to include four members from Bay St. Louis, four from Waveland and four from Diamondhead.

That also was a three-to-two vote, with Kellar voting no because he opposed any funding and Ladner voting no because he opposed cutting the amount of funding.

Ladner's first attempt Monday to fund the chamber was also voted down, but the board order was rescinded and the vote was taken again later in the same meeting.

Beat One Supervisor Bert Courge, after listening to Chamber Board of Directors President Richard Thomas Monday, agreed to withdraw his original proposal for chamber board reorganization.

Thomas explained that the chamber board actually has 20 members and that reorganizing as Courge required would be impossible.

He explained that the 20-member board is elected from nominees chosen by a three-member committee.

The nominees are selected from the general membership, which currently consists of more members from Bay St. Louis, Waveland and Diamondhead than from the county because there are more businesses in those areas.

After discussing the matter with Director Charles Benvenuti, Courge said he would agree to fund the chamber on the contingency that about half the directors selected in the next election are from the rural area.

Benvenuti said the chamber nominating committee could make sure that at least half the nominees are from rural areas, but said there is no way to guarantee that all those people would be elected.

He added that the chamber would need the supervisors' assistance in order to attract new members from the rural community.

Courge commented after the meeting that if those nominees from the county are not elected, he will not vote to fund the chamber next year.

Courge also stated that his initial refusal to fund the chamber and his refusal on the first vote taken Monday had nothing to do with the chamber's stand on the unit system issue.

"I talked to three of your ex-board members. I mean no offense to (Chamber Executive Director Olivia) Milner, but you had a girl capable of taking over the executive director job and you decided instead not to hire locally," he explained.

He also stated that the chamber's bylaws state that part of the organization's purpose is "to promote jobs for local residents" and that the chamber advocated hiring someone from outside the county as road maintenance superintendent.

Beat Four Supervisor Sam Pernicaro said his opposition was based on the fact that he felt the county is contributing too much of the taxpayer funding in comparison to the amount contributed by Bay St. Louis and Waveland.

Beat Five Supervisor James Travirca said he would agree to supply $16,000 annually to the chamber, but decided to vote with Ladner, Courge and Pernicaro for the $22,890 funding after Benvenuti explained that services might have to be cut.

"Our budget is pretty fixed," Benvenuti explained. "Any reductions would have to come from the promotional end. We would have less money to promote the county."

He also reminded the supervisors that someone would have to take over those promotional duties for the county if the chamber could no longer afford them.

Kellar voted with the rest of the supervisors to rescind the original order for $9,400 in funding but was the only supervisor voting against funding in the end.

He continued his contention that the chamber "gets political" and does not serve all of the people in the county.

"Do you think the chamber represents this entire county," he asked directors who attended the meeting. "I say it does not and people I have talked to in the county say it does not," he said.

Pearl River campus readies for fall

POPLARVILLE — On August 18, Pearl River College will open its doors for the 77th year as Mississippi's first, leading, and lowest tuition junior college in the state.

When students enroll this fall at Pearl River, they will pay $25 more tuition than last year. But with this increase, students will pay only $250 tuition - the lowest among all junior and senior colleges in the state.

The increase is in tuition only, whereas, many other Mississippi junior colleges are increasing cost of student services.

This year the college will be under the leadership of new PRC President Dr. Ted J. Alexander. Dr. Alexander became president this July after the retirement of Dr. Marvin R. White who held the top position at PRC for 18 years.

During summer months the Pearl River College campus has been getting a face lift with the $400,000 renovation of White Hall, the second largest girl's dormitory on campus.

In addition to landscaping improvements, the Pearl River College Wildcats will be lighting up a new $18,000 scoreboard donated by the Coca Cola Company for the Doble Holden Stadium.

The 1986-87 school year will see the premier of the Wildcats backed by the newly formed Wildcat Booster Club. PRC students will enjoy an extra day off this year as Mardi Gras has been added as an official holiday.

Some things that haven't changed for the upcoming year includes the excellent commuter busing system provided by the college. Commuter buses will make over 60 stops a day in nine cities with the Pearl River College six-county supporting district. One's semester bus fee is $100 which averages $5.56 per week round trip.

Although August 18, is the first day of registration a number of activities will take place on the Pearl River College campus prior to the students' first day.

The Wildcat football team will report for camp on Thursday August 7, for two-a-day workouts.

The Pearl River College Band, the String of Pearls dance team, and PRC cheerleaders will meet on August 11 for camp.

The Oak Grove High School Marching Band and the Comeaux High School Marching Band from Lafayette Louisiana held camp from July 28 to August 1.

Hattiesburg High School Band held camp on the Pearl River College campus from August 4-8.

It has been our observation over the years that one of the easiest governmental bodies to appear before in Hancock County is the board of supervisors.

A person wishing to address the board just appears at one of the meetings of the supervisors and the board president will ask if anyone wishes to address the group.

I feel this is a very good policy on behalf of the supervisors, and it gives everyone an opportunity of being heard without having to go through a lot of red tape.

We are very happy the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce is going to receive regular funding from the Hancock County Board of Supervisors.

The chamber provides so many services to the county.

The chamber has few business memberships in the county and needs more representation in the organization.

One of the tasks of the chamber is to bring our county and city businessmen closer together, and helping to do this will be by having more county memberships.

Many things can be accomplished by working together and everyone working together can solicit more county chamber memberships.

Some may have forgotten, but the chamber was very instrumental in the formation of the Hancock County Fair and Livestock Association and also the Hancock County Farmers Market, and for many years conducted formal tours of farms and businesses in the county.

The commitment by the supervisors and chamber leaders in promoting more county memberships in the organization is a great step forward.

By the way, the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce's membership drive has been set for September 16-26.

A House Bill enacted by the Mississippi Legislature and signed by Governor Bill Allain to provide all buildings and residences on highways, streets, and roads to be numbered and systematically identified so they can be located without difficulty or ambiguity, is something which has been needed for many years.

We have ourselves tried many times to locate a 'John Doe,' whose address is route something box xyz, and have had to seek assistance in finding him.

We know law enforcement agencies, fire companies and also ambulance services will really appreciate the numbering when it has been completed.

The bill designates the numbering to be done by the State Highway Department and local governing authorities.

This sounds like a big task and will need the help and cooperation of many folks.

The rain finally came late Saturday and it appeared to sink into the ground as fast as it came down.

We were talking to a couple on Sunday who said they were caught Saturday in a big thunderstorm on the twin bridges. Traffic was held up because of an accident and the rain was coming down so hard they could not even see the water from the bridge.

Our area can still use more rain as it is beginning to become very dry again.

Weather is always a good topic of conversation in our area.

Eyes on Mississippi

By Bill Minor

JACKSON—Mississippi, with 521 elected black officials, again ranks first among all states, certainly a far cry from the situation in this state 19 years ago when blacks began to make their first breakthrough in state politics since the end of Reconstruction.

Figures recently compiled by the Joint Center for Political Studies in Washington showed Mississippi's nearest competitor in black elected officials to be Louisiana, with 488. Illinois was next with 426, followed by Georgia with 417, Alabama, 402 and South Carolina, 329.

While 521 elected blacks may seem a rather impressive number, it is only about 10 percent of all the elective county, city and state offices in Mississippi. Yet, compared to the entire nation, that's not so bad. While blacks constitute about 11 percent of the nation's voting population, nationally they hold only 1.5 percent of elective offices.

Of course it is a fact that Mississippi has the largest proportion of blacks in its population—35.4 percent according to the 1980 census—which explains in part why it is first in the number of elected blacks.

But it is also a tribute to the determination of blacks to become registered and vote after the enactment of the 1965 Voting Rights Act. Often black voter drives even as late as the early 70's met with local white resistance.

Mississippi has no centralized, accurate register of how many voters there are statewide because of its archaic system of purging the voter rolls. Unofficial estimates put the total figure at 1.5 million. Blacks are estimated now to have 450,000 registered, or about 30 percent of the statewide total.

Blacks made their first political gains in 1967 when Robert Clark of Ebenezer became the first black elected to the State Legislature since 1868. Significantly, the same year, Marshall County, the only black majority county in Northeast Mississippi, elected its first county-wide black official this century when Osborne Bell won the job of coroner and ranger.

The story of Osborne Bell is one of the most fascinating in the emergence of bi-racial politics in Mississippi. After three terms as county coroner, Bell got into the race for sheriff in 1979, with support from influential white politicians, chiefly longtime politico J. M. "Flick" Ash, the chancery clerk.

Bell unseated the white incumbent sheriff while whipping several other white candidates. In his re-election bid for sheriff in 1983, Bell easily dispatched five white opponents in the first primary. Local observers say the popular Bell would have easily won a third term in 1987, but tragedy struck in May when the black sheriff was gunned down while making a drug search of a Georgia couple whose car had been stopped by officers.

Now the unique bi-racial political system in Marshall County, where blacks had only a slender 53.4 percent population majority in the 1980 census, faces a critical test in November over the election of Bell's successor.

The county's blacks of course, consider it an article of faith that another black be elected to replace Bell. Some key white politicians say, however, the extraordinary popularity of Bell is not a transferable political commodity.

Probably the most momentous political event for Mississippi blacks since the 1880's took place on June 3 when black Supreme Court Justice Reuben Anderson won the Democratic nomination for a full term on the high court from the Central District. Thus, Anderson, who had been appointed to the Supreme Court a year or so ago by Gov. Bill Allain, became the highest ranking black to win an election in Mississippi this century.

Naturally the question will be raised: Can a black win a statewide elective office in Mississippi? The unequivocal answer any politically knowledgeable person would have to give is: "No...certainly not in the foreseeable future."

The only possibility of a black being elected to a statewide office, many believe, is if the state political parties were forced to run on tickets by the elimination of the runoff primary, or the installation of the "open primary" system. In that case, the party would no doubt have to put at least one black on the ticket for state office.

This is virtually what happened in Virginia last year when the Old Dominion state elected Democratic Lt. Gov. L. Douglass Wilder as the first black in the South to win a statewide election.

Still a phenomenon in Mississippi is white politics in a black land—the election of shrewd white politicians, many of them formerly arch-segregationists, with the assistance of black voters.

While white voters have almost solidly polarized around white candidates, it has been evident in a number of cases that black voters have crossed-over to vote for white candidates in sufficient numbers to elect them.

But some black politicians are becoming embittered that whites won't exercise the same kind of color blindness in their voting patterns.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Another view of non-profit organization gambling

Letter to the Editor
Sea Coast Echo
Dear Sir,

In view of all the bad publicity given to the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and other non-profit organizations, people should take a hard look at what is right and wrong and who benefits from the profits of non-profit organization gambling.

Gambling has become a popular source of revenue and entertainment for many non-profit organizations to raise needed funds for various community projects and needy people in their community.

Church groups, Veterans organizations, volunteer fire departments, and many other non-profit groups use gambling as means for fund raising, whether it's bingo, slot machines, fairs, or Las Vegas nights.

These non-profit organizations have helped raise money for churches, schools, hospitals, police and fire departments, drug and other rehabilitation programs, and have aided the sick, homeless, and people in despair. These non-profit organizations support scholarships, youth programs, medical research, and many other programs for which public funds are not available.

When a child and his family go to bed hungry at night, or when a baby can't have an operation because the parents are not financially able, when a senior citizen is sitting in the cold because the city turned off the utilities, or when a veteran who fought for his country is unable to get hospital care, who do they turn to for help?

Without the help and donations from these organizations, many people would suffer great hardships and have nowhere to turn for help. These non-profit organizations are a credit to their community, and many people receive help from them at one time or another.

I would like to praise the men and women of these non-profit organizations for their dedication, time, and concern for their fellow man, their community, their country, and the hard work done for those less fortunate.

I would also like to condemn those public servants and law enforcement officers who, for the past few years, have been making an all-out effort to shut down veterans' clubs and other non-profit organizations, at the expense of the needy people of Mississippi.

I feel that law enforcement time would be better spent catching murderers, rapists, drug dealers, and child molesters, and that our public servants' time would be better spent fixing streets, schools, and utility systems.

I feel some of these public servants are not working in the best interest of the community, and on election day they will be remembered.

On Saturday, August 2, 1986, we were out sailing on our 14-foot Catamaran when the rain storm came up.

We would like to commend all those involved with our rescue, especially the crew of the M/V Wahoo out of Mobile, Ala.; the U.S.

Some of the common everyday places to you are wonders to us, such as the beach, shoreline houses and even the public library.

We are impressed with the courtesy we received in stores and the cleanliness of your streets. Your 4th of July fireworks along the Coast are fascinating as well as the friendly faces that have introduced us to these things.

We wish to say thank you for making our visit here an educational and fun one.

Mississippi
Economic Council

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT LEADERSHIP FROM THE SENATE

The message is the same; it hasn't changed in two years.

The message was delivered to the members of the state Senate's Finance Committee a few days ago, delivered by a representative of the national Conference of State Legislatures.

The message to the state: You're on your own now; you can no longer go to the federal government for the solutions to your economic problems.

That message was one of the reasons the Senate committee was meeting.

The chairman, Senator Bob Montgomery of Canton, is looking for long-term solutions to Mississippi's economic plight.

Tax increases and reductions in governmental expenditures, he suggests, are short-term solutions. The long-term answer, the Senator believes, is a more productive economic development effort, one designed to expand the state's economic base.

There is a sense of urgency among committee members. They are aware that approximately two-thirds of the other states are already in some phase of development or implementation of a state economic development plan.

As Senator Montgomery said, Mississippi needs a coordinated economic development plan, one with established goals and objectives, specific assignments to the various governmental institutions involved in economic development, and with established means for measuring performances of those institutions.

The committee has as its own goal, the enactment of legislation in 1987 for providing such a plan.

This is refreshing leadership at a time when the state needs an economic boost.

Political action group details constitutional hostility to education

Mississippi First, Inc., the legislative political action committee which has pledged to campaign in 1987 for legislative candidates who support a new state constitution, pointed Monday to eight provisions of Mississippi's present Constitution which handicap public education in Mississippi.

According to Mississippi First Chairman Brad Pigott, "Mississippi's 96 year old Constitution goes out of its way to express hostility and suspicion toward the whole enterprise of public education."

"In a way when public education is the necessary cornerstone of any state's potential for future economic growth," according to Pigott, "the Mississippi Constitution not only fails to guarantee every child a chance for basic education, but actually gives specific authority to the Legislature to abolish the public schools in this state and to authorize each school district to abolish its schools and to dispose of school facilities."

The modernization and progress of public education in Mississippi is also handicapped, according to the Mississippi First group, by provisions of the present state Constitution which:

- authorize the College Board to fire any professor "at any time for malfeasance, inefficiency or contumacious conduct" (Section 213A);

- authorize public schools only for children of certain ages (Section 201);

- permit the Speaker of the House, a legislative officer, to have the executive power to appoint two members of the State Board of Education (Section 203);

- require county superintendents of education in each county, whether or not the superintendent has any

- schools to administer (Section 204);
- refer to a school year extending only four months (Section 206);
- require a special College Board member to look after only one university - the University of Mississippi - and require that trustee to be from only one county - DeSoto County (Section 213A);

- give constitutional status to the names of certain institutions of higher education (Section 312A).

The education provisions of the present Mississippi Constitution are part of what the Mississippi First group has called "ninety things wrong with the 1890 Mississippi Constitution," most of which the group says it will announce during the remainder of August and during September.

Residents balk at selection of fire district commissioners

BY DENA BISNETTE

Some residents of the recently created BaySide Park Fire Protection District are protesting selection of the board of commissioners named in a resolution approved by the Hancock County Board of Supervisors.

A special meeting has been called by the protestors for 7:30 p.m. tonight at the BaySide Park Volunteer Fire Department's station on Hinds Street, spokesman Martin DeSalvo said.

The district consists of BaySide Park subdivision, Bayou Phillips and parts of Lakeshore served by the BaySide Park Volunteer Fire Department.

The district is designed to enable the department to raise additional tax revenue to finance operation and equipment purchases.

Final approval was granted by the supervisors at their July 30 meeting after a petition opposing the district was recalled.

The petition had been presented by Joyce Garcia who was named a commissioner in the resolution along with Albert Biehl, Willie J. Ellis, L. Lloyd Ladner Jr., and Shelby T. Hall.

On Monday, DeSalvo and other residents of the district, including some who are volunteer firefighters, protested to the supervisors.

DeSalvo alleged that Garcia had named the commissioners without polling residents and said he had expected to be named as a commissioner representing Bayou Phillips.

Other commissioners the group proposed included Ashley Paroli, Anthony Hano, Wayne Rodman and Ray Prentice.

The group was told by Board of Supervisors Attorney Walter James Phillips that the matter is out of the jurisdiction of the supervisors as far as the commissioners are concerned and was advised to consult an attorney.

Cameras visit the composer at his home on the Orkney Islands off the coast of England, where a traditional early morning wedding celebration takes place, complete with bagpipes.

Mississippi's changing newspapers

By Patti Carr Black
Mississippi State
Historical Museum

The following article resulted from a grant from the Mississippi Committee for the Humanities to the Mississippi Press Association. The opinions expressed are those of the author and not of either organization.

Newspapers owned by out-of-state corporations are an increasing phenomenon in Mississippi. With new people and new outlooks, the traditional role of the newspaper in Mississippi is changing.

Until recent years Mississippi newspapers were passionate and partisan. No philosophy of presenting both sides clouded an issue. The balanced view was not attempted or even admired. Fairness was something expected from baseball umpires, not editors. News coverage often echoed the editorial stance.

Historically, the role of Mississippi newspapers has been the control of politics through deliberate molding of public opinion. Editors in the 19th century held a heady position in Mississippi society, living dangerously by practicing what was called "pugilistic journalism."

They wrote fiery, no-holds-barred editorials and kept loaded pistols by their sides. Even after duelling was outlawed, editors were frequently challenged to settle editorial disputes by pistol or fist.

The tradition goes back to the days before Mississippi became a state. Andrew Marchalk arrived in Natchez in 1799 with a printing press and strong opinions, and soon took on Judge George Poindexter, one of the Mississippi Territory's most prominent political figures.

After a series of editorials criticizing Poindexter in his paper, The Mississippi Herald, Marchalk was fined $20 for contempt of court.

Marchalk announced publicly that he was happy to pay the fine because he intended just that: contempt for Judge Poindexter. They kept up their feud for more than a quarter of a century, throughout Poindexter's term as the second governor of Mississippi and United States senator from Mississippi.

During the flush years of the 1830's, newspapers turned into party journals. In the senatorial campaign of 1835, L. A. Besancon, editor of the Mississippi Free Trader and Natchez Gazette, vigorously wrote for the Democratic Party and the candidacy of Robert J. Walker.

On the day before the election, his office was sacked and he was almost lynched in Whig-controlled Natchez.

Another Mississippi editor of that era who lived dangerously was the Irish-born editor of the Vicksburg Sentinel and Expositor, Dr. James Hagan. Normally, Hagan was mild-mannered and amiable, but with pen in hand, he was ruthless. The fierceness with which he attacked enemies led to frequent altercations.

In 1843 he was killed during a knock-down, drag-out fight on the streets of Vicksburg.

After the Civil War, almost every little community developed a newspaper as they became even more important in Mississippi politics. Before the war there were 41 newspapers in the state. Five years after the war, in 1870, there were 111 newspapers, almost all published for a political purpose.

During this Reconstruction Era, the pugilistic style was finely honed by bitter editors on each end of the political spectrum. Two of the most vitriolic editors in print were A. J. Frantz of Brandon and W. H. McCord of Vicksburg whose invective against all carpetbaggers kept tempers stirred.

In fact, the traditional style of writing kept most editors in controversy. Ridicule and derision, hyperbole and outrageous epithets were the common literary weapons. Editors seemed to feel a responsibility to attack their opponents and exaggerate the virtues of friends. A. W. Webber, editor of the Jackson Pilot, went so far as to justify publicly the use of slander. He wrote that in political matters it is "justifiable to use any piece of scandal against a public man as though it were a portion of God's truth - and even to use it when known to be utterly false."

Some editors entered the political arena and became successful candidates for office: George W. Harper of the Hinds County Gazette, Hernando D. Money of the Winona Democrat-Advocate, and in the 20th century, James K. Vardaman of the Greenwood Enterprise.

One of the most politically active and influential editors was Ethelbert Barksdale of the Jackson Clarion. He helped organize the Reconstruction Party and eventually landed in Congress as the farmer's candidate.

Mississippi's last old-style pugilistic journalist was Fred Sullens of the Jackson Daily News. For many years it was a regular occurrence for Fred Sullens to have a fist fight with a member of the Mississippi legislature.

Two of his major targets were Theodore G. Bilbo whom he called Theodough Graftmore Bilbo, "the puking polecat from Poplarville, and Paul B. Johnson, Sr. whom he variously called "Judgepaulbull-johnson" or "the Hattiesburg Hyena."

Typical of his pugilistic verbiage was this announcement of one of Johnson's political speeches: "There will be a buzzard swarming at Poindexter Park tonight. If you have buzzard appetite, go out and enjoy yourself. But please go home to do your puking. It costs money to clean public parks in Jackson."

Not surprising, the political thought behind such bellicosity usually was governed by emotion, not reason, and Mississippians through the years have often been led by a newspaper's passions.

Today a new style of editor reigns in Mississippi. What Mississippi readers have lost in passion, we have gained in understanding. What we have lost in color, we have gained in sharper outlines of issues.

Nevertheless, we cannot complacently expect national chains and out-of-state owners always to have the best interest of Mississippi at heart. Neutrality can turn into indifference. We can and do hope that newspapers with absentee ownership will exhibit a deep commitment to their adopted communities through intelligent and balanced reporting and commentary.

Newspapers are necessary instruments of democracy and that function must never be neglected.

The average American family has an annual income of around $25,000.

HEAT HITS HENS HARD

The temperature was 102 degrees in the shade for the second consecutive day last week as Rankin county egg producer Louis Smith stood in the aisle of his 8,000 capacity henhouse with a dead hen in each hand wondering if the day's heat kill would be as bad as the previous day when he lost 265 prime hens at their laying peak.

Frustration was written on the face of the seven year veteran egg producer as he watched thousands of chunky white hens and roosters gathered mostly around automatic watering devices to gulp vitamin enriched water in an effort to stay alive.

The hens weren't singing that day. There were no cackles from the nests. Instead, their mouths gaped open and they visibly gasped for air. Some squatted. Some eventually settled to the ground and quietly stretched out-dead. It was another bad day for Louis Smith, poultryman.

Smith's laying hens were 31 weeks old and were in their laying peak before the hot weather in the form of a heat wave spreading from the east arrived.

As the temperatures rose in his carefully designed laying house, egg production slumped from a collection of about 6,500 eggs daily to about 4,200, or 64 percent of normal.

It was a loss that Smith described as "inability of being made up," and one that cut his margin of returns from his full time egg production business below the profit level into the loss column based on egg production alone.

When the summer temperatures began to soar a couple of weeks ago Smith began losing from 34 to 36 hens daily. When this reporter visited his henhouse last week his losses had climbed to about 600 laying hens from the house and the profit from the year's operation already was as a shimmieing heat apparition hanging over the galvanized metal building about six miles north of Pelahatchie.

The irony of it is the fact that Louis Smith, like hundreds of other poultry professionals, had done everything from a technological standpoint to avoid heat losses.

The sidewall curtains that regulate the ventilation of his laying house were more sophisticated than most, capable of being opened either from the top or bottom according to climatic conditions.

Only last week he completed the installation of a fogging system throughout the house which consists of a plastic water pipeline in the ceiling with spray mist orifices or tiny nozzles located periodically along the line to emit a cooling water mist to quickly vaporize and help reduce temperatures inside the house. Large fans churned the steamy air.

The feed supply was cut back to half of normal since the usual ration for the laying peak of the hens generated too much body temperature in the birds and was a factor in heat deaths in the flock.

Smith said other egg producers were reporting similar losses in their flocks. He indicated that most growers telephone other growers to share information during such times, particularly when threatening weather develops.

Even a thunderstorm, Smith said, can create problems for a laying flock. A dark cloud that appears with a storm will cause laying hens to quit laying and tend to begin settling down for the night. So many egg producers install automatic switches to turn on electric lights when the sky becomes dark during bad weather in order that hens continue to feed and lay eggs.

The good side of this story is that there are poultrymen out there like Louis Smith who put their livelihood on the line everytime they order a new houseful of baby chicks that hopefully will grow into broilers, or a houseful of pullets and young roosters that will provide the eggs that will be hatched into broiler chicks or served to eager eaters all across the land.

Men like Louis Smith gross less than two cents per egg for the essential hatching eggs he produces—despite whatever risks come his way. So consider that the next time you pay for that inexpensive but good old all-American breakfast or chicken dinner!

Like Winnie-the-Pooh in the storybooks so beloved of the little—and not so little ones, I often think that it's "time for a little something"—some delicious tidbit or other to accompany tea or coffee or cocktails or whatever—and I've been happily sampling several such delicious little "somethings" recently.

For instance, when is a hot dog not just a routine hot dog—staple of children's lunches and picnics? When it's turned into Janice Logan's "Hot" Hot Dog Tidbits, that's when! So, here's:

JANICE LOGAN'S
'HOT' HOT DOG TIDBITS
1 12 OZ. CAN BEER
2 Tblsp. finely chopped Jalapeno pepper
1 Tsp. Tabasco
½ Cup Kraft Hot Barbecue Sauce
1 Pkg. Hot Dogs, cut into 1-inch pieces

Mix all ingredients in a shallow pan and marinate overnight. Pour into a medium size saucepan and cook over medium heat for 10 minutes, or until hot. Serve with toothpicks—and a cold drink!

And, next:
JANICE'S CRAB
STUFFED MUSHROOMS
12 to 18 large fresh mushrooms, stems removed
2 Tblsp. vegetable oil
½ lb. fresh lump crabmeat
1 Egg, slightly beaten
2 Tblsp. mayonnaise
2 Tblsp. chopped yellow onion
1 Tsp. lemon juice
½ Cup breadcrumbs
2 Tblsp. melted butter

Quick-wash mushrooms with a damp cloth or paper towel or drain briefly in a colander—don't let them get too wet as they'll absorb the water. Brush mushrooms with two tablespoons of oil and place in a shallow baking pan.
In a large bowl, mix the crabmeat, onion, egg, mayonnaise, lemon juice and ¼ cup breadcrumbs. Stuff mushrooms with crabmeat mixture. Sprinkle the remaining breadcrumbs over the mushrooms, and pour melted butter atop each mushroom. Bake at 375 degrees for 15 minutes.

And to complete our Tasty Trio, let's sample:

JANET BALCH'S
PICKLED SHRIMP
2½ Cups cooked, peeled shrimp
1 Cup olive oil
½ Cup red wine vinegar
½ Cup tarragon vinegar
4 bay leaves

Juice of half a lemon
1 small bottle capers
2 Tblsp. sugar
1 Tblsp. Worcestershire Sauce
5 medium to small onions, sliced into rings

Tabasco and salt to taste
Make a dressing by mixing the oil, vinegars, bay leaves, lemon juice, capers, sugar and Worcestershire. In a large bowl, layer the shrimp and onions, making several layers. Pour dressing over, refrigerate at least 12 hours.

ETV Brief

FIRST CONTACT

An upcoming documentary on Mississippi ETV contains actual footage of the first encounter, 56 years ago, that the Papuan tribes of New Guinea had with outside civilization.

"First Contact," a film that has won many awards and an Academy Award nomination, will be broadcast at 9 p.m., Wednesday, August 13.

It was in 1930 that three Australian brothers, the Leahys, set off through the New Guinea interior to search for gold. They discovered, instead, thousands of Stone Age people who had no concept of human life beyond their valleys.

The Leahys happened to have brought along a movie camera in case they encountered anything of interest; thus they captured on film their unexpected confrontation.

"First Contact" combines the Leahys' recently recovered footage and interviews with the two surviving brothers and many members of the tribe. One tribesman described his people's first sight of the explorers: "We believed our dead went over there, turned white, and came back as spirits. That's how we explained the white man; our own dead had returned."

Several other Papuans recall their original perceptions of the Leahys in amusing detail. For instance, when they first viewed the prospectors' rucksacks, one tribesman remembers, "We thought their wives must be in there."

Conservation Reserve Program signup set

August 4 thru 15 has been set for the third signup period for the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP).

The CRP, which was authorized by the Food Security Act of 1985, is a voluntary program to help land owners prevent or control serious soil erosion that is now occurring on more than a third of America's cropland, according to Doug Stephens, Hancock County District Conservationist.

To enroll in the CRP, farmers must have cropland that is highly erodible, land that has been cropped three years out of the last five years (1981-1985), and they must go to the ASCS office in Poplarville to signup. An erosion determination will be done on the fields offered to determine eligibility, Stephens said.

Enrolled landowners will receive cost-share for establishment of grass, wildlife plantings, or trees on eligible fields. Enrollment is for ten years with annual payments based on approved bids.

During the first two signup periods, 6 farmers in Hancock County put 1000 acres in the CRP.

County school board continues to seek agriculture teacher

By BRENDA HEATHCOCK
The status of securing an agriculture teacher for Hancock North Central High School was questioned Monday at the school board meeting.

Hancock County Agent Lee Taylor told the board several citizens were concerned because it is so close to the beginning of the year and the position had not been filled.

Superintendent Terrell Randolph replied that the district was "pursuing" the situation and inquiring into a feasibility study on the need of an agriculture teacher.

"I don't see why if the people of the county want an agriculture teacher what value a feasibility study has," Taylor said.

Taylor said he was aware of at least one application filed for the position.

Board Member Tommy Ladner said he had understood there was supposed to be a recommendation presented to the board in this meeting.

Randolph said although there was an application for the position, no recommendation by HNC Principal Donald Hillman had been made.

Board President Billie Faye Lyons instructed Randolph to continue seeking a teacher for that position and contact the retired agriculture teacher D. J. Martin regarding teaching until a permanent teacher was hired.

Taylor said Wednesday that there is a real need for agriculture education in the county.

"The agriculture industry in Hancock County currently brings in more than $7 million a year," he said.

"I just hate to see agriculture 'kicked while it is down,'" Taylor added.

As it stands now there are a lot of older farmers who are going to retire and there are not any young farmers to take their places, he said.

"There are more than 225 farms in the county and thousands of acres planted each year in wheat and soybeans alone," Taylor said.

Taylor said he was very glad for the sake of farm industry in the county that the board is actively seeking an agriculture teacher.

Also during the meeting, the board approved the first payment certificates to Tilley Constructors and Architect Fred Wagner for the two-classroom addition under construction at Gulfview Elementary School.

The certificates totaled near $30,000, with $28,498 approved for Tilley and $449 to Wagner.

Board members Lyons, Shaw and Ladner voted in favor of the payments. Necaise opposed the issue and Monvel Cuevas was absent from the meeting.

In other business the board:

—Approved the resignation of Beatrice Ladner as cafeteria worker at Hancock North Central.

—Approved recommendation to employ Charlotte Ladner as full time cafeteria worker and Linda Cuevas as part-time cafeteria worker at Hancock North Central.

—Approved the resignation of Cathy Boyet and Stephanie Holden as teacher assistants at Charles B. Murphy Elementary.

—Approved a recommendation to employ Lucy Mitchell and Catherine Doby as teacher assistants at Charles B. Murphy Elementary for the 1986-87 school year.

—Approved the recommendation of Philip Terrell as Adult Education Supervisor for the 1986-87 school year.

—Approved the recommendation of Charlotte Johnson as teacher for the Vocationally Disadvantaged Program for the 1986-87 school year.

—Approved the recommendation of Ann Lang as Librarian at Gulfview Elementary for the 1986-87 school year.

—Approved the recommendation of Katie Reed as Special Education teacher at Hancock North Central for the 1986-87 school year.

—Approved a request to advertise for bids for carpet for Kindergarten classrooms.

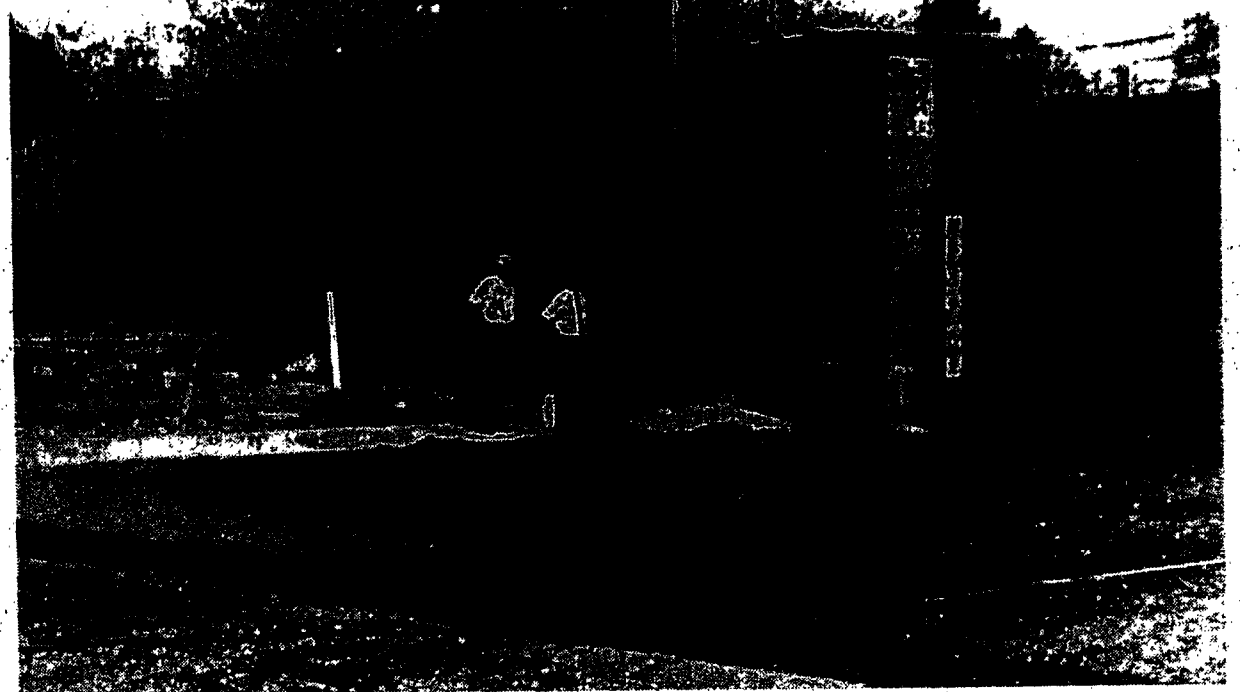

—Approved the recommendation of Sharon Klein as kindergarten teacher at Gulfview Elementary for the 1986-87 school term.

—Approved a request to release James, Angela and Patricia Baldree, and Emily Hamilton and Dawn Austill from the District to attend school in another district for the 1986-87 school year.

—Approved a request for James Pair to attend Performance Based Accreditation Procedures to be held in Biloxi on Aug. 12.

—Approved a request for Gulf Coast School Boards Association quarterly meeting to be held at Hancock North Central High School Cafeteria at 7 p.m. on Thursday, Aug. 21.

—Approved a request for Staff Development for Hancock County be conducted at Gulf Park College in Long Beach on Aug. 18-19.

CHECKING PROGRESS—Gulfview Principal W. H. Haddock, left, and Hancock County School District Superintendent Terrell Randolph view progress on the eight-classroom building at Gulfview. The original construction project for six classrooms is expected to be completed within two weeks but the two-classroom addition will not be completed until after school has started. (Staff photo by Brenda Heathcock)

Grad placement high

HATTIESBURG—Industrial arts education graduates at the University of Southern Mississippi have a high job placement percentage because of a shortage of teachers at the secondary school level.

The shortage of industrial arts teachers apparently is related to expanding industrial and/or technical programs at the high school level.

News Brief

FOOTBALL PRACTICE

The Hancock North Central Hawks will begin football practice Monday, Aug. 11.

Head Coach Irvin Favre said returning team members as well as others who have moved into the district should report at 2 p.m. at the fieldhouse located adjacent to the football stadium.

USM Vocational Education Department Chairman Dr. William Burns said he gets "numerous calls from high school principals desperately needing teachers for their industrial arts programs."

These requests, Burns noted, come from out-of-state as well as from Mississippi school systems. An industrial arts teacher earns approximately $16,000 a year.

"That is for working just nine months with opportunities to pursue other work in the summer such as drafting and design work with engineering firms," Burns added.

The USM industrial arts program provides hands-on experience in the technical areas of drafting and design, woods, plastics, metals, power machinery and electronics. Graduates qualify for a state teaching certificate to teach at the junior and senior high levels.

Suspects.....

"The occupant then got her husband's gun and asked the suspect what he wanted and he then fled, and she called the sheriff's office," Seay said.

Ladner was later apprehended by Hancock Deputy Sheriff Nathan Hoda, Peterson allowed.

In other police matters, Jimmy D. Smith, 31, Rt. 1, Box 118, Picayune was arrested in connection with the burglary of an auto at a Flat Top Community church on Sunday, Peterson said.

Smith was apprehended by Hancock Deputy Sheriff Albert Biehl and charged with the burglary of an auto, according to Seay who is in charge of the investigation.

Seay added, "A purse, cash, watch, and rings were all recovered in the incident."

Smith's bond was set at $2,500.

Budget.....

district is presently $7,246,805.

That also consists of 18 mills, which is expected to yield about $120,000 for the school district.

Randolph said part of the increase in the school budget consists of a seven percent increase allowed by law and the other part consists of new programs.

Included in the new programs are kindergarten; buses purchased for kindergarten transportation; a new junior high principal for Hancock North Central School, which has not had a junior high principal in two years; a new assistant principal for Gulfview Elementary School; an assistant maintenance and transportation supervisor and a business manager.

Also included are a few items, such as a curriculum director, which were not approved by the Hancock County School Board.

The budget will be amended to remove those items, Randolph said.

Randolph told the board that Hancock County is one of the few school districts that has not had a bonded indebtedness or had to make use of short term notes within the past six years.

He said the increase in the budget totals $451,000 over last year.

Phillips pointed out that the school district should look into the use of short-term notes rather than placing the burden on the taxpayers all at one time.

"When those taxes go up, the people are not going to come looking for Terrell Randolph, they are going to come looking for us," Beat Three Supervisor Roger Dale Ladner told Randolph during a two-and-one-half hour board meeting.

The supervisors also questioned whether the increase would actually help the quality of student performance.

Courrage pointed out that although Hancock County is one of the highest-ranked districts on the Gulf Coast in terms of dollars spent per student, test scores indicate performance ranking above only Moss Point.

Courrage, using figures from 1983, said Hancock County has a consistent record of high expenditures per student and low test scores.

In addition, the supervisors questioned Hancock County's teacher supplement, which costs the district about $1,300 annually per teacher.

"I have nothing against teachers," Kellar stated, "but do you want us to have to raise the millage this much?"

"That's six or seven mills. Do you think the people can stand this type of raise? That's at least 10 mills for the ones living in fire and water protection districts?"

Randolph countered Kellar's argument by stating that the Hancock County School District, with 2,600 students, is the biggest employer in the county outside NASA's National Space Technology Laboratories.

"All I'm doing is asking for ... a first class school district here," Randolph said.

"I'm not fighting against better education, but I will fight for the taxpayers who have to pay through the nose for something they are not going to get," Kellar said.

After the board voted to approve the budget because Tuesday was the last day on which a budget could be approved for mandatory 10-day public review, Ladner asked for legislation separating the board of supervisors from the school district budget process.

Ladner said he asked for the separation because he feels the board has no actual effect on the amount of the school budget.

The board is presently allowed to approve the budget only for the purposes of determining the amount of millage to be set.

Opening ceremony for national event slated at BWYC Monday

The Opening Ceremony for the 1986 United States Junior Sailing Championships will be conducted at 8:30 a.m. Monday at the Bay-Waveland Yacht Club.

The event will be hosted by BWYC, sailed over five days in three categories — Sears, Bemis, and Smythe.

The Sears Cup was first placed in competition in 1921 by Commodore Herbert M. Sears of the Eastern Yacht Club, Marblehead, Mass.

This emblem of the Junior Sailing Championship was to be competed for annually by young people between 15 to 18 years of age whose parents or guardians were members of the Massachusetts yacht clubs.

In 1922 the Massachusetts yacht club restriction was removed and final races for the Sears Cup can be conducted by a yacht club located anywhere in North America.

Since 1976, competition for the Cup has been open to crews of three (or four) boys or girls who have reached their 13th birthday, have not reached their 18th birthday during the year in which the series is held and who are members of a recognized yacht club in North America.

Andy Lovell of Southern Yacht Club, with crew members Rosalind Meade and Barton Jahncke will represent the Gulf Yachting Association and Area D in the Sears.

The Bemis, which is a double-handed event, was first held in 1975. It is sailed concurrently with the Sears and Smythe series.

The Smythe, single-handed, was placed in competition in 1974. David Mendelblatt of St. Petersburg Yacht Club with crew George Frush will represent Area D in the Bemis and Alex Ascencios, from Sarasota Sailing Squadron will sail the Smythe.

Local residents will host the 30 teams which will be here to compete from August 10 - 15.

Harry Chapman, regatta chairman, and his committees have planned numerous activities for the sailors when they are not racing, including a dance, barbecue, and cruise up the Jourdan River.

Walter Chamberlain will serve as Race Committee chairman for the 10-race series which concludes with an Award Banquet and Closing Ceremony on Friday night, Aug. 15.

Businesses which will each sponsor a race during the series include Hancock Bank, Bank of Louisiana, Boh Bros. Construction Co., Gulf National Bank, Domino's Pizza, John McDonald Realty, Lovell & Co. CPA, and Olympic Sailing Association of Southern Yacht Club.

Okatibbee Lake offers outdoor fun

MOBILE, ALA.—Visitors to Okatibbee Lake, some seven miles northwest of Meridian, will find a variety of attractive recreational facilities where they can enjoy boating, fishing, swimming, water skiing, camping, picnicking, hunting, sightseeing, bird watching or nature photography.

The lake offers excellent fishing for largemouth bass, striped bass, crappie, catfish and bream. Several fishing tournaments are staged each year.

The Mobile District, U. S. Army Corps of Engineers, manages the 10,900-acre project. There are seven day use areas which are open to the public. There are nominal fees at campsites at Twitley Branch and for several picnic shelters. Otherwise, all areas are available free of charge.

Twitley Branch campsites are located on the west side of the lake near the Collinsville community and can be reached by traveling state Hwy. 19 to Collinsville, turning east on the West Lauderdale School Road and following the brown signs for about two miles. There are 54 designated campsites in Twitley Branch, mostly on the water.

Each site has running water, a fire ring and a picnic table. There are 27 sites with electrical hookups. The campground also has a dump station, launching ramp, and swimming beach just for the campers and their visitors.

Groupsites are available for several families who may want to camp together. A new camper washhouse, complete with restroom facilities, hot showers, and coin-operated laundry, was opened in the spring.

The park attendants on duty at the entrance station collect daily fees for camping at $7 a site with electricity, $5 without. The campground is open from March through October so campers can take advantage of the mild climate in central Mississippi.

A popular area with fishermen is the Tailrace Access Area, often called simply the spillway. It lies directly below the dam and offers the visitor facilities for picnicking and primitive free camping.

The moving water offers the angler a challenge in landing crappie, bass, catfish, or striped bass. Recently a 25½ pound striper was landed, and catfish over 45 pounds have been caught here in the past. Large strings of crappie and bream are common.

Collinsville Park is the most popular day use area. Here you will find picnic facilities, picnic shelter, launching ramp, and a designated swimming beach, the biggest drawing card. There is also a variety of playgrounds, including a softball field. Two modern restrooms have been opened for public use this year.

East Bank Park, Gin Creek Park, and Pine Springs Park are several other areas with various facilities for camping and picnicking. In addition, several areas have been leased to other agencies, and an area has been leased to a private marina operator on the west side of the lake. This area, when developed, will provide boat docking, fuel and boating supplies.

During hunting season approximately 5,000 acres of land are available for public hunting. The Mississippi Department of Wildlife conservation has responsibility for management of much of this area. A permit is needed to hunt anywhere on the Okatibbee Lake Property.

Permits can be obtained free of charge from the Department of Wildlife Conservation or the Corps of Engineers Resource Manager's Office.

For more information, contact the Resource Manager's Office, Okatibbee Lake, P. O. Box 98, Collinsville, Miss., 39325-0098, telephone (601) 626-9431.

Enjoy the breeze—and the spray—on water skis at Okatibbee Lake

Picnicking is one of the country's great outdoor "sports," and at Okatibbee lake there are many pleasant spots to enjoy it.

USM faces tough basketball schedule

HATTIESBURG—Fifteen home games, an appearance in the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga Christmas Tournament and a full home and home Metro Conference slate highlight the University of Southern Mississippi's 1986-87 basketball schedule released today by head coach M.K. Turk and athletic director Bill McLellan.

The Golden Eagles, coming off a successful 17-12 season that included a fourth place finish in the Metro and an appearance in the NIT, open Dec. 1 at home against Northeast Louisiana, wrap up the regular season Feb. 28 at Florida State and play in the conference tournament Mar. 6-8 at South Carolina.

In between, the Eagles host the other six Metro teams along with South Alabama, Central Arkansas, California-Riverside, Georgia College, North Texas State, Illinois Wesleyan, Jackson State and Arkansas State while playing at Arkansas State, Tennessee Tech, McNeese State and Southwestern Louisiana.

Turk, who earned Metro coach-of-the-year honors for his team's surprisingly strong finish a year ago, says the upcoming schedule "continues a long line of competitive schedules played by USM teams."

"We're proud to again have 15 home games," he said. "That's extremely important to us and to our fans and I'm sure the players and fans will respond accordingly. Obviously the pre-conference schedule should adequately prepare us for the wars of the Metro."

Turk also sees a different Metro year. "The league should be the most balanced since we joined," he said. "It should be an interesting, exciting and challenging season and obviously we have high hopes of being among the top teams."

In addition to the televised conference tournament, the Golden Eagles are tentatively set for seven TV appearances as part of the Metro's Raycom package. That includes home games against Florida State, South Carolina, Memphis State and Virginia Tech and road games with Virginia Tech, Louisville and Florida State.

The month of December promises to be a busy one for the Eagles who play 11 games before the new year. That includes a pair of games (Dec. 29-30) in the annual Chattanooga (Tenn.) Christmas Tournament. The field there, in addition to USM and host UT-Chattanooga, includes Samford and Colgate.

Following a brief holiday break, USM returns to action Jan. 5 at Cincinnati, the start of the grueling Metro Conference schedule that finds the Eagles playing six league games in both January and February.

The complete schedule follows:

DECEMBER

1- Northeast La., home; 2- at Arkansas State; 11- South Alabama, home; 13- Central Arkansas, home; 15- Cal.-Riverside, home; 18- Georgia College, home; 20- North Texas State, home; 22- at Tennessee Tech; 27- Illinois Wesleyan, home; 29-30- at the Chattanooga Invitational Tournament.

Bassin' with the Pros

by Trey Foerster

Readers' questions answered

Here are several letters from readers that I have asked Guido Hibdon, Johnson Outboards staff member, to answer.

Harold D. Kramer of Memphis, Ind., asks:

"I have a problem that is apparently fairly common but quite frustrating. I do a lot of bass fishing. I go to larger ponds, small lakes and state-owned reservoirs. I use everything from buzz, crank and spinner baits, to worm and jib/feel combinations. Generally speaking, I catch as many bass as anyone—maybe more."

"However, every single fish seems to be a photocopy of the other as far as size goes. I'm unable to put any combination together to catch anything 14 inches or more. Every one I catch is either 12 or 13 inches long. Am I missing the boat?"

Guido Hibdon responds: "If you're catching a lot of fish, you know you're doing more or less the right thing. My advice would be to try a bigger bait. If you're throwing a buzzbait, I can't imagine you're not catching some good fish. Maybe you're just in the wrong pond! Sooner or later, if you're using a buzzbait, you have to catch a good-sized bass. If you throw a buzzbait long enough, you'll catch a good fish."

Russel Ownes of Pataskala, Ohio, writes:

"I've been an avid bass fisherman for the last 15 years. I'm glad to see your column in my newspaper and I hope to learn more about the sport. You can never learn too much about bass fishing."

"I've watched a lot of bass fishermen catch bass on rubber worms. I've tried several times with little luck. I can never seem to 'feel' the strike until it's too late. What's the secret? I've had the same problem fishing with a pig and jig. Is it the same method or should I fish a pig and jig differently?"

Guido Hibdon responds:

"The pig and jig has its time and the plastic worm definitely has its time. On a pig and jig you can catch bass almost year 'round, whereas a plastic worm has its time. In very cold water in your part of the country, I don't think you can catch a bass on a plastic worm when the temperature gets down to 40 degrees like you can on a jig. I don't think there's any month in the year that you can't catch a fish on a jig, but there's several months that you can't catch them on a worm."

"The secret to using a pig and jig is to throw it a lot. That's about as truthful as you can get. We use about 10 different retrievals; up and down, slow and fast, sometimes you have to pump it, sometimes you have to crank it fast and let it fall. You have to spend a lot of time on the water to figure out what's most effective on the bass."

"I think the secret to fishing a plastic worm is to have faith in it. When all else fails, after the water temperature reaches 60 degrees, the plastic worm will catch bass. It's a bread-and-butter bait. You can work it in so many different places—you can go into cover with it, over the top of cover with it, you can fish it deep, you can fish it shallow."

Humor contest

Everybody has a good joke to tell about fishing. I'd like to hear some of those jokes and the best ones will be repeated to over 2½ million people who see this column nationwide. The best ones received will get a small "goodie bag" with lures the manufacturers of which say will catch bass. Just write down the joke and mail it to Bassin' with the Pros in care of the Sea Coast Echo, P. O. Box 230, Bay St. Louis, MS 39520.

CONTAMINATED DRINKING WATER?

To MOTHER's Experts:

I've heard horror stories about contaminants seeping into residential well water from industrial sites, gas stations, and the like. How can I check out my own water?

—Thirsty but Scared

Dear T but S:

Unfortunately, it is all too possible for residential water from private or community wells to be contaminated with toxic organic chemicals or heavy metals at concentrations that represent long-term health risks. Detecting these contaminants requires sophisticated instruments, and a complete battery of tests may cost close to $1,000. You might try this first:

Find the source of your drinking water—a private well or spring, or a public well or reservoir. Mark its exact location on a map of the surrounding area. Then walk or drive around all the land within a five-mile radius, checking for abandoned or operating industrial sites, hazardous waste dumps, or municipal garbage pits. If you find nothing, you can breathe a partial sigh of relief, because it's not likely that your water will be contaminated by any source of pollution beyond that radius (although that's by no means guaranteed). If you still want to have your water analyzed, call your state capital's EPA office or talk with a chemist at a local university. State specifically that you want your water analyzed for trace organic chemicals and heavy metals but not for bacteria, viruses, pH, or hardness. If these folks can't do the job, ask them for the names of at least three commercial laboratories that might.

Next, check with the county health department. Even if the people there don't have the necessary equipment, they, too, should be able to recommend some labs.

If you must go the commercial route, contact several labs about their services, prices, methods, and response time. Stress exactly what you're seeking, and check that the facility has a gas chromatograph (GC), to measure trace organic compounds, and an atomic absorption spectrophotometer (AA), to measure heavy metals. Also inquire whether the lab will do any preliminary GC scans in a "semiquantitative" fashion—this option will save you money if it's readily apparent that your water is uncontaminated. And find out how and when to take the water sample. You simply cannot fill an old pickle jar with tap water and expect to get valid results!

Finally, keep an eye on activities within the "zone of influence" around your well, to safeguard your water supply for the future.

ETV Brief

WILDLIFE SANCTUARY

Narrated by Orson Welles, "Last Kingdom of the Elephants" tells the story of one of the few remaining unspoiled wildlife sanctuaries in Africa, Zambia's Luangwa Valley. The one-hour "Living Wild" presentation airs at 8 p.m., Thursday, August 7, on Mississippi ETV.

Elephants, hippos, buffalo, zebra, giraffe and an abundant variety of smaller animals are tied to the seasonal changes of the mighty Luangwa River. Heavy rains there produce devastating floods, destroying many animal habitats. Then, when spring arrives, the sun produces a time of rebirth and plenty. But by October, the scorching heat brings drought and tension as the animals vie for precious water.

The cameras capture a multitude of dramas, from a dispute among thirsty lions to hundreds of hippos fighting for space in evaporating water pools.

"Living Wild" is a weekly Thursday evening series of some of the best wildlife films ever produced by the BBC. Each program repeats on the following Thursday afternoon at 1:30 p.m.

STERLING PERFORMANCE—Martin Booda as a much-in-demand bachelor Irish detective turns in an outstanding performance in the current run of a Waveland Players production of 'Bull In A China Shop' at the Civic Center on Coleman Avenue. Janet Hinyub, left, as a newspaper reporter and Lady Carver as the 'ringleader' landlady contribute substantially to the suspense and hilarity of the presentation which is scheduled for two more evenings, Friday and Saturday, with curtain at 8:15 p.m. Also performing are Edith Back, Gayle Roy, Ingrid Ling, Barbara Fitch Glenda Coss, Ted Stechmann, Sonny Bailes, Mike Carver and Jeff Eberhart. Director is Mike Hamm and producer is Joyce Ohman.

Construction ahead of schedule on state's Technology Transfer Office at NSTL

The National Space Technology Laboratories may be Mississippi's best kept secret, says John Green, executive director of the Mississippi Department of Energy and Transportation, but it's a secret he plans to have a hand in revealing.

The facility, part of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration network, houses scientific and technology offices of 17 federal agencies on its grounds, Green said.

Besides its space mission, work in oceanography, meteorology and earth sciences take place at the facility. Also located in the immediate area is the Mississippi Army Ammunition Plant operated for the U.S. Army by Mason Chamberlin, Inc.

It is this great scientific and technological resource that Mississippi can tap into in order to help it move forward that constitutes the secret Green wants to make known.

He was speaking before a multi-agency meeting MDET sponsored at NSTL to acquaint other state agencies with the Technology Transfer Office, supported by MDET, the Mississippi Research and Development Center and the Governor's Office, that is being opened at NSTL. The office is headed by Dr. James Miller.

Miller and Green both warned the group that while NSTL represents a great asset for Mississippi, people should not greatly inflate their expectations about the immediate future.

"It takes 15 years to move technology from the place where it's first demonstrated into general usage," Miller said. "What we have to plan for first is a continuity of effort on our part. When we have that, the Technology will begin to flow, and we will begin seeing changes take place."

Miller said that technology, to be transferred, must be owned by someone. To be transferred, it must be purchased. The purpose of his office will be to identify the recipients of technology that may be available from NSTL and help arrange the orderly transfer of the technology to industry in Mississippi.

He noted that technology can be transferred only between equals and that his office will be the link that brings the equals together.

One of the reasons NSTL is such an apparent secret is the way the site developed into what it has become today, said Bob Barlow, an NSTL spokesman.

When the site was first developed, its sole purpose was to test engines to be used in the Apollo Program. Today, the Mississippi Test Facility of the 1960's has become NSTL and has grown from slightly more than 1,000 employees to nearly 4,700.

From a single mission, that of testing rocket engines, the site now has three missions: testing rocket engines, earth resources and managing the installation to provide other agencies the support they need to carry out a wide variety of missions ranging from oceanography to the environment, he said.

The growth has taken time and caught many people unaware, Barlow said. NSTL has disseminated some of its technology as local firms have grown up in response to the needs generated by work taking place on the site, Barlow said.

Miller reported to the group that a building being constructed by the state to house his office is ahead of schedule and the office space that it will provide for the site could attract more agencies or scientific groups to NSTL.

State agencies with representatives at the meeting, besides the Energy and Transportation Department were the Research and Development Center, the Gulf Coast Research Laboratory, and the Department of Natural Resources. Representatives of the Municipal Energy Agency of Mississippi, a consortium of municipally operated utilities, also were present, as were representatives of Sverdrup Technology, Inc., NSTL's new technical services contractor, and representatives of some of the 17 federal agencies with offices on the site.

Many weeds growing in America today arrived from Europe in soil used as ballast in ships coming to the new country for cargoes. Ballast dumping has sowed weed seed from Europe all around the coasts of the U.S.

Dictating morality tool of fascism

The following article resulted from a grant from the Mississippi Committee for the Humanities to the Mississippi Press Association. The opinions expressed are those of the author.

Robert I. Alotta
Communication
Mississippi State

Liberty weekend demonstrated what wonderful place immigrants from everywhere perceived America to be: Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness represented a freedom not elsewhere experienced.

However, if something doesn't happen soon, freedom will be taken away from all of us.

Just recently, a Tupelo-based group, calling themselves Christians in Action, called on Home Box Office to edit R-rated films that appear on this pay channel after 8 or 9 p.m., to prevent "innocent children" from viewing violence and nudity. What they demand is that HBO show those uncut films with the R-rating only after midnight.

On the surface, Christians in Action have a good point: minors cannot be admitted to a theater to view these films, and they should not be allowed to watch them at home. But, Christians in Action forgot one little fact.

In the case of R-rated movies, shown in theaters, the manager can refuse admission to an underage person or suffer a penalty under law.

Who should deny the minor child admission to the home television set? The parent, not the cable company or the cable channel. If a curious child watches the mayor of Carmel, Calif., in "Tightrope" on HBO or Showtime or Cinemax, the fault does not rest with the pay channel.

The fault lies with the negligent parent.

Christians in Action are apparently going after the wrong culprits. They should be attacking the permissive parents!

Bruce Weatherly, the voice heard on Christians in Action's radio commercials, makes a point which we are unsure he realized he made.

Weatherly said: "Seventy percent of [the people of] Tupelo profess Christ as Lord, yet night after night, over half our homes are reveling in raw naked lusts of the flesh and immorality coming uncut into their homes over cable channels they pay extra to get."

The point he is making is that those who profess to be Christians are actually hypocrites, using the privacy of their homes to learn something they can't learn in church.

They are watching such R-rated films as "Birdy," a story about two young men traumatized in Vietnam and how their friendship allowed them to cope—each in his own way; "The Last Married Couple in America," an excellent film about one couple who stayed together despite their friends' divorces; "Porky's II: The Night After," a film that alludes to just what Christians in Action are trying to do...in this film, however, HBO is not the target; it is Shakespeare; and countless other films that present a message and, in so doing, use copulatory expletives and some nudity.

In the films mentioned, the nudity and the expletives were natural to the action.

The high percentage of "revelers" might be a title farfetched because of the wide variety of shows available on cable. Does this group really believe that HBO subscribers are such loyalists that they only watch one channel night after night?

Weatherly's advertising might backfire, since many of us never realized that we could see "uncut, unedited blood, violence, bare-naked adultery" on HBO every night.

"What will our society be like when this generation raised on [unedited films] grows up?" We wonder too about these same people, the ones who Christians in Action feel are unable to distinguish between the real and the reel, but who fall prey to the one-sided message of Christians in Action.

Weatherly's message is that television has precipitated a moral decline, resulting in "a 1,400-percent increase in premarital sex, a 4,000 percent increase in venereal disease, 700 percent more rapes and 600 percent more violent assaults than 30 years ago."

He uses these figures as if they were caused only by television watching. Social scientists have been unable to come up with the correlations that this Tupelo crusader has.

Even members of the Meese Commission have not been able to correlate pornography with violence. Correlations have been developed to link the introduction of the pill with the increase in premarital sex and the increase in venereal disease, but for the others....

There was a time when people believed in what their church said. The Roman Catholic Church once had a listing of movies called The Index. It was a compendium of what movies Catholics should not see. To see these films meant that a Catholic committed a sin.

Most Catholics avoided these films. The Index died a natural death when the film companies were forced to affix ratings to their productions. Not that we're suggesting The Index return, but that seemed, at the time, like a logical way to handle the moral beliefs of members of the Catholic Church. It affected one group, no other. The Index was directed toward Catholics, alone.

Christians in Action is not so selective. This group is attempting to orchestrate control over everyone, not only members of their own group, their own coterie of believers.

Christians in Action feel they have the best interests of all the people in mind. So did the author of the following statement:

"The life of the people must be freed from the asphyxiating perfume of our modern eroticism, as it must be from unmanly and prudish refusal to face facts."

"In all of these things the aim and the method must be governed by the thought of preserving our nation's health in body and soul."

"The right to personal freedom comes second in importance to the duty of maintaining the race...."

The author was Adolf Hitler, in "Mein Kampf." And we all know what he accomplished.

THIS WEEK'S HOROSCOPE

BY SALOME

Aries (Mar. 21-Apr. 19) Stop wool-gathering and start making real plans to deal with real challenges that will begin to emanate from Gemini and Libra quarters.

Taurus (Apr. 20-May 20) Take that planned time off later. Right now, charge into the newly-arrived opportunity that appears to have your name written all over it. Good luck.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Handle the new competition so that it works in your favor. Rather than let it bruise your ego, use it as a spur to increase productivity.

Cancer (June 21-July 20) Competing forces can seem overwhelming if you allow yourself to be pushed to the edge. Clear a way for yourself to emerge with your own ideas.

Leo (Jul. 21-Aug. 22) The temptation to roar back at an unfair competitor betrays your own weakened position. Strengthen your weak spots and then make that bold move.

Virgo (Aug. 22-Sept. 22) It's a time to weigh words carefully. What you say may well reflect your views, but are you sure the reflection isn't slightly distorted?

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Cool the tendency to be overly demonstrative. Sometimes it's best to be temporarily withdrawn in attitude than being overdrawn emotionally.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) The current situation is confusing. But don't try to please everyone. Follow your own good sense of what's right.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Watch the tendency to overindulge in various activities. It's better to do a little less than you expected than being overdrawn emotionally.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A misunderstanding needs to be smoothed over before it flares up into something more serious. Don't ignore the problem. Act on it now.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) An apparent set of mixed signals is easily straightened out. Act quickly to reassure others of your intentions. Cooperation must be given.

Pisces (Feb. 19-Mar. 20) A feeling of being left adrift passes once you assess your position. As soon as you know what your goals are, head for them immediately.

Every year, foreign visitors spend about $14 billion in the U.S.

Narcotics News

Donald Butler
Director
Bureau of Narcotics

Q: Where does someone who is on drugs go for help?

(J.M., Jackson)
A: There are various organizations available throughout Mississippi that provide alcohol and/or drug recovery programs. My suggestion is for you to check the yellow pages in the phonebook under drug abuse and addiction treatment or some heading to that effect.

It should provide a list of those centers available in your area that will offer the trained help you will need. Some will be privately run centers and others listed will be chemical dependency units within a hospital. Both will provide the skilled counseling and treatment needed for the chemical dependent.

Narcotics Anonymous, a non-affiliated self-help group for drug addicts, may have a group in your area.

If your agency can be of any further help or if you would like to ask a question, call toll free 1-800-222-7646 or write to: Mississippi Bureau of Narcotics, P.O. Box 6462, Jackson, MS 39212.

Black named dean at USM

The chairman of the Department of Economics at the University of Southern Mississippi has been named to head the College of Business Administration, effective July 1.

Dr. Tyrone Black, chairman of economics at USM for the past eight years and acting dean of the college for the past year, replaced Dr. Joe Greene, who retired as dean of business administration in 1985.

"We are delighted Dr. Black has accepted this appointment," said Dr. James Sims, vice president for academic affairs at USM. "The faculty has a great deal of confidence in him, and he has done a good job during the past year as acting dean. We look forward to the leadership he will bring to the university."

Black's selection follows an intensive search to replace Greene, who has held the dean's position since 1949. Greene remained on the USM business faculty as an economics professor during the past year.

Black received bachelor's and master's degrees from Texas Tech University and a doctorate from Tulane University in 1970. He taught classes at USM for seven years before accepting an administrative position at McMurray College in Abilene, Texas, in 1976. In 1978, he returned to the USM campus and has been chairman of economics since that time.

He is the co-author of a text book for an upper-level economics and finance course and has written numerous articles in the area of manpower economics and applied economics.
